Honorable City Council:

RE: Authorization to rename Lafayette Entrance Park, also known as Park No.421 located at 1435 E. Jefferson to Elizabeth Gordon Sachs Park.

The General Services Department is requesting authorization from your Honorable Body to rename Lafayette Entrance Park located at 1435 E Jefferson [Parcel IDs: 07000088-9 & 07000090-2] to honor Elizabeth Gordon Sachs, community activist and founder of the Greening of Detroit.

In 1989, Elizabeth Gordon Sachs founded The Greening of Detroit as a nonprofit organization dedicated to reforestation of the City of Detroit. Gordon Sachs engaged and mobilized Detroit residents, businesspeople and philanthropists raising $100,000 for the first tree planting in 1990 along the median of Larned from I-375 to Mt. Elliott. Thirty-three years later, these trees stand as a testament to her dedication to creating a greener Detroit. Since its inception, the Greening of Detroit has planted 135,000 trees. They maintain the downtown Lafayette Greens Park offering hands on gardening opportunities to volunteers each week. Greening of Detroit also operates a 19-acre tree nursery located in Rouge Park where they grow tree stock for reforestation use and provide specialized workforce training and education programs for youth and adults.

For these reasons, the Greening of Detroit would like to honor the legacy of Elizabeth Gordon Sachs with the park renaming. In support of this renaming, they have aggregated 500+ signatures from community members and others in support of this action.

We respectfully request your authorization to rename Lafayette Entrance Park to Elizabeth Gordon Sachs Park with a Waiver of Reconsideration.

Sincerely,

Crystal Perkins

City Council - Submission Date: _____ Approval Date: _____

Over 100 years ago, Detroit was honored as one of the country's first City of Trees, recognized for its tree-lined boulevards, lush parks and wooded neighborhoods. Unfortunately, between 1950 and 1980, half a million trees were leveled by disease, storms, and urban expansion, leaving streets barren. During that same time, economic constraints prohibited the city from replacing the trees. Devasted by the deforestation, Elizabeth Gordon Sachs mobilized key Detroit residents, business people and industry professionals in support of an effort to reforest the city of Detroit. In 1989, she founded The Greening of Detroit as a nonprofit organization dedicated to helping the city raise tree planting funds. For its first project, The Greening raised $100,000 for a 1990 planting along the median of Larned from I-375 to Mt. Elliott. Most of those trees, now grown tall, stand as a testament to her dedication to creating a greener Detroit.

And more than three decades later, the work of The Greening of Detroit continues to improve the city, with a mission to guide and inspire the sustainable growth of a healthy urban community through trees, green spaces, healthy living, education, training and job opportunities. Since its inception, the organization has engaged thousands of volunteers who have rolled up their sleeves and shoveled sweat equity into the city the love, planting 135,000 trees throughout Detroit. The Greening also has created programs to train and employ the people who live here to care for the trees and green spaces, including the Detroit Conservation Corps (DCC), which prepares disadvantaged residents for jobs in the green sector while also providing a pipeline of qualified workers for employers; and the Green Corps youth employment program that allows teens to gain valuable work experience as they provide essential summer maintenance for newly planted trees and participate in environmental enrichment and service-learning experiences. The Greening of Detroit also operates Lafayette Greens, the beautiful downtown garden that offers an exceptional setting for nutrition, health and wellness programs; and the Meyers Nursery, a 19-acre site at Rouge Park where the organization is growing tree stock and native plants, and providing specialized workforce training and education programs for youth and adults.
